Project EARLI (Education Assistance for Children and Rehabilitation of Livelihoods) is an early recovery project in response to Super Typhoon Nina (International Name: Nock-Ten).

Super Typhoon Nina hit Bicol, Philippines on Christmas Day 2016. It affected over 1.7 million people, 90% of whom are in the Provinces of Albay and Camarines Sur. Educo estimates that 40% or over 600,000 of the affected population are children.

One of the many classrooms in Bicol damaged by Super Typhoon Nina in December 2016.

Project Objectives

1

Children have immediate access to functional and conducive learning environment and sustained their education

- ✓ Addressing needs for children's school materials
- ✓ Improving damaged school facilities

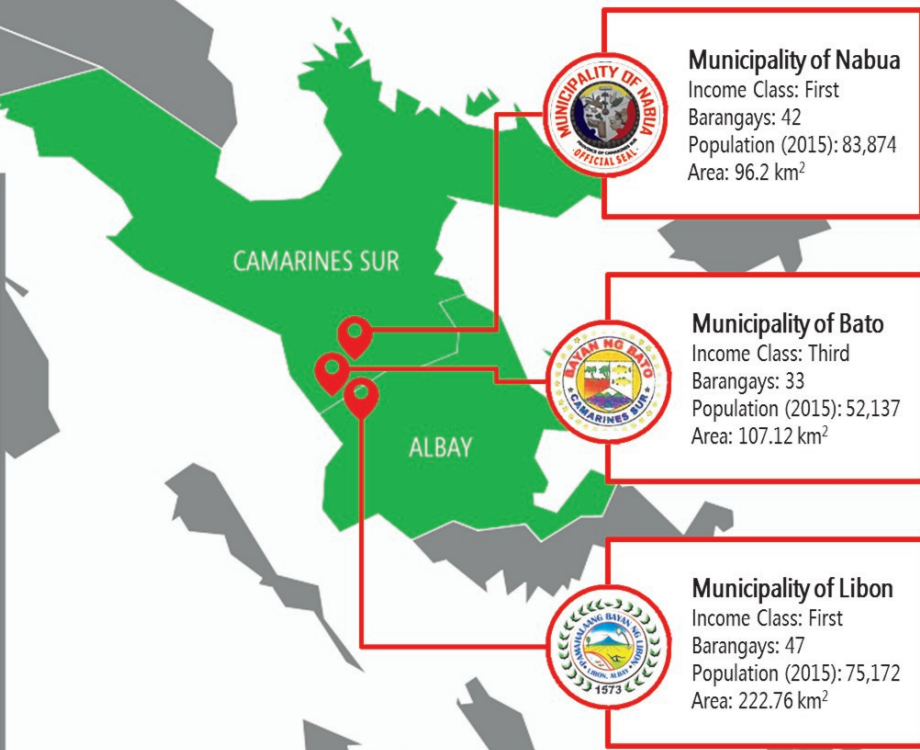

2

Child-centered disaster risk reduction management mechanism is implemented at community and school levels

- ✓ Increasing knowledge on child-centered DRRM among schools and community stakeholders
- ✓ Developing capacities of children and their families to identify and implement activities that would reduce their exposure to disaster related risks
- ✓ Stabilizing food production to ensure that the family's and children's basic needs are met
